Anne Sanders has been Associate Professor for Civil and Comparative Law at the University of Bonn since 2013 and deputy head of the Institute of German, European and International Family law since 2017. She teaches and publishes on family law, company law (especially family businesses), the law of art forgery and judicial independence. In both 2016 and 2017, she received the University teaching award. Since 2014, Professor Sanders has worked regularly as an expert for the Council of Europe on projects concerning judicial independence and the quality of judges' work. From 2009 until 2011, Professor Sanders has been a law clerk/judicial assistant at the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany (Bundesverfassungsgericht).

Professor Sanders has received her Habilitation and PhD (summa cum laude) from the University of Cologne in 2007 and 2017 respectively. She has read law at the Humboldt-University of Berlin (First State Exam 2002) and the University of Oxford (M.Jur. distinction, 2006). She was a scholar of the Studienstiftung des Deutschen Volkes (German Academic Foundation), the Bucerius Law Foundation and a member of the Young Academy of the Nordrhein-Westfalian Academy of Science and the Arts. During her Referendariat (two year programme preceding the Second States Exam/Bar Exam) she worked at the Regional Court of Cologne, the European Commission (Brussels) and the Law Commission for England and Wales (London).
